

The following communication was posted to Halliburton Company's website related to the pending acquisition of Baker Hughes.

DOJ timing agreement

By: Robb Voyles, executive vice president and general counsel

Today Halliburton and Baker Hughes announced they have entered into a timing agreement with the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) pursuant to which they have agreed to extend the period for the DOJ's review of Halliburton's previously announced acquisition of Baker Hughes to the later of November 25, 2015 or 90 days after both companies have certified substantial compliance with the DOJ's second request. You can read the entire press release here.

To help answer some of the questions you may have about today's announcement, please review the FAQs on the timing agreement. We will make every effort to keep you informed throughout this process, keeping in mind that there are certain legal and regulatory requirements that we must follow.

1. What does this press release mean?

- Halliburton and Baker Hughes have entered into a timing agreement with the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) to extend the time the DOJ has to review Halliburton's pending acquisition of Baker Hughes.
- Halliburton and Baker Hughes also have agreed to extend the time period for closing the pending acquisition through Dec. 1, 2015.
- Timing agreements are intended to provide the DOJ with additional time to review the companies' responses to the DOJ's second requests.

2. What does this mean for the deal?

- Timing agreements are not unusual and are often entered into in connection with large, complex transactions.
- The second requests are a standard part of the regulatory review process by the DOJ and were expected by Halliburton and Baker Hughes.
- Both companies goal continues to be to complete the transaction late in 2015.

3. What happens next?

- Halliburton and Baker Hughes expect to certify substantial compliance with the DOJ's second requests by mid-Summer.
- Halliburton and Baker Hughes will continue planning for the integration of the two companies across product lines, regions of operation and functional support areas.
- Halliburton and Baker Hughes will provide updates on the regulatory process as appropriate.
- Halliburton and Baker Hughes remain competitors until the closing of the deal.

4. What does this mean for the previously announced divestiture plans?

- The previously announced plans to divest Halliburton's Fixed Cutter and Roller Cone Drill Bits, Directional Drilling and Logging-While-Drilling (LWD)/Measurement-While-Drilling (MWD) businesses remain unchanged.
- Halliburton expects to complete the sale of the businesses in the same timeframe as the closing of the pending Baker Hughes acquisition.
- The sale of these businesses will not be completed until we have agreed to terms and conditions with the relevant buyer, obtained approval of Halliburton's Board of Directors and obtained final approval of the Baker Hughes acquisition by competition authorities.
- Halliburton will operate as one company, including the businesses held for sale, until the sale of the identified businesses is complete.

5. Will additional divestitures be announced?

- Halliburton has shared with various competition enforcement authorities around the world a proposal to divest additional businesses of the companies which, together with the previously announced divestitures, are within the scope of those contemplated by Halliburton at the time of the announcement of the transaction.
- Halliburton expected to be required to divest certain of the companies' overlapping businesses to obtain competition authorities' approvals when we announced the Baker Hughes acquisition.

6. What should we communicate to our customers and other stakeholders?

- You can tell customers and other business partners that we are committed to providing information on the pending acquisition as appropriate.
- Halliburton remains absolutely focused on service delivery and we will continue to deliver outstanding solutions and services to our customers.
- We are confident that the combined company will be a stronger and more diverse organization with the resources to better serve our valued customers well into the future.
- Halliburton and Baker Hughes remain competitors until the closing of the deal.

7. What should I say if I am contacted by the media or another third party?

- If you receive any inquiries, please refer them to our PR department at PR@Halliburton.com or 281-871-2601.
